Norman Schofield

Spring 2012

Tuesday, Thursday 4.00-5.30

Syllabus

In the last few years a number of important books have appeared that combine elements of economics reasoning and political science, in an effort to understand the wide variation in economic development in the world. This course will deal with the logic apparatus underpinning these books. In addition, the course will introduce the student to the theoretical apparatus that can be used to examine democratic institutions in the developed world, and the success or otherwise of moves to democratization in the less developed world.

Requirements. Students will be expected to work on two short research papers, either empirically or theoretically based. The total length of these essays should be approximately 20pp. If time permits, there will be an opportunity for students to make a presentation of their work at the end of the semester.

My books and articles are available on my website at http://polisci.wustl.edu/norman_schofield
