“CLOSING THE DEAL:
NEGOTIATING MAJOR LEGISLATION”

Instructors:
Gary Miller
Itai Sened

This course examines the outcomes of the legislative process in the United States. The first third of the course will examine key concepts and major determinants of the negotiation process: majority rule instability, agenda control, political parties, the amendment process, and the uncovered set. The rest of the course will examine the negotiations that led to some of the most significant legislation in the past 100 years, from the Federal Reserve Act of 1913 through the Voting Rights Act of 1965 to the immigration bill of 2006. Along with other assignments, each student will write several drafts of a major research project on a major piece of legislation. Each research project will examine the amendments offered, the strategic intentions of the amendments’ sponsors, the agenda process, coalition formation, and the role of party.

Prerequisites: American politics 101B

Required texts:
Riker. The Art of Political Manipulation.
Mayhew. Divided We Govern.

Evaluation:

As a writing intensive course, your grade will depend mostly on several writing requirements. The first will be a short paper of 3-5 pages explaining your understanding of the problems of majority rule decision-making (25% of grade). A second paper (5-8 pages) will examine the political background of a major piece of legislation of your choice (30%). You will be asked to discuss partisan, regional, and interest group preferences and strategies, the role of the President, and any differences between the two chambers. Substantive legislation on immigration, social security, education bills, energy bills, and environmental legislation will all be appropriate topics.

The final writing assignment (8-12 pages) will incorporate the results of your research on the legislative process and political negotiations that shaped the outcome of the bill of your choice. You should discuss which legislators offered which amendments, how the timing of roll call votes was determined, and what coalitions backed which amendments and why.

The remaining 10% of the grade will depend on students’ regular participation in class.
